Air Source Heat Pumps Natural Resources Canada

Air-source heat pumps draw heat from the outside air during the heating season and reject heat outside during the summer cooling season. There are two types of air-source heat pumps. The most common is the air-to-air heat pump. It extracts heat from the air and then transfers heat to either the inside or outside of your home depending on the season. The other type is the air-to-water heat pump

The degradation of ammonia in absorption thermal machines

When water-ammonia absorption machines are used as heat pumps, the main problems can be found in the components operating at a high pressure (generator-condenser); the increase in temperature with respect to the exertion as refrigerator generates particular conditions that might unbalance the decomposition of ammonia into nitrogen.
